BLACK TO BE BRIDGED.

The bill permitting the construction of the drawbridge for the Lawrence county railroad, over the Black river at Powhatan, received final passage in the lower house of congress today. The bill permits the Lawrence county railroad, a proposed line, to construct the bridge.

The Lawrence county railroad will connect with the Iron Mountain at Hoxie, and will reach in a westerly direction as far as Smithville, a distance of 25 miles. The intermediate stations will be Portia, Powhatan and Denton.
